Career arc

Four eras, twenty years

ESP

~7 yrs

Modernize .NET apps

Corsair Gaming

~7 yrs

Own commerce platform

First Republic

~3 yrs

Own bank content platform

JPMorgan Chase

~3 yrs

Reliability → MLOps

20 years in software

6 years in financial services

The common thread — Solo platform owner · coordinates contractors, vendors and internal teams · production first

Era 1 · ESP (later acquired by IHS Markit) · ~7 years

Application modernization in .NET (C#)

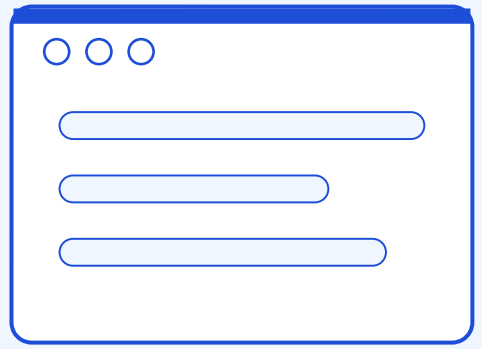

~7
years

.NET · C#

Older desktop business app

rebuild

Modern web app
on newer technology

Moving older business apps onto newer technology

Takeaway: change working systems safely

Era 2 · Corsair Gaming · ~7 years

Live-store commerce migrations

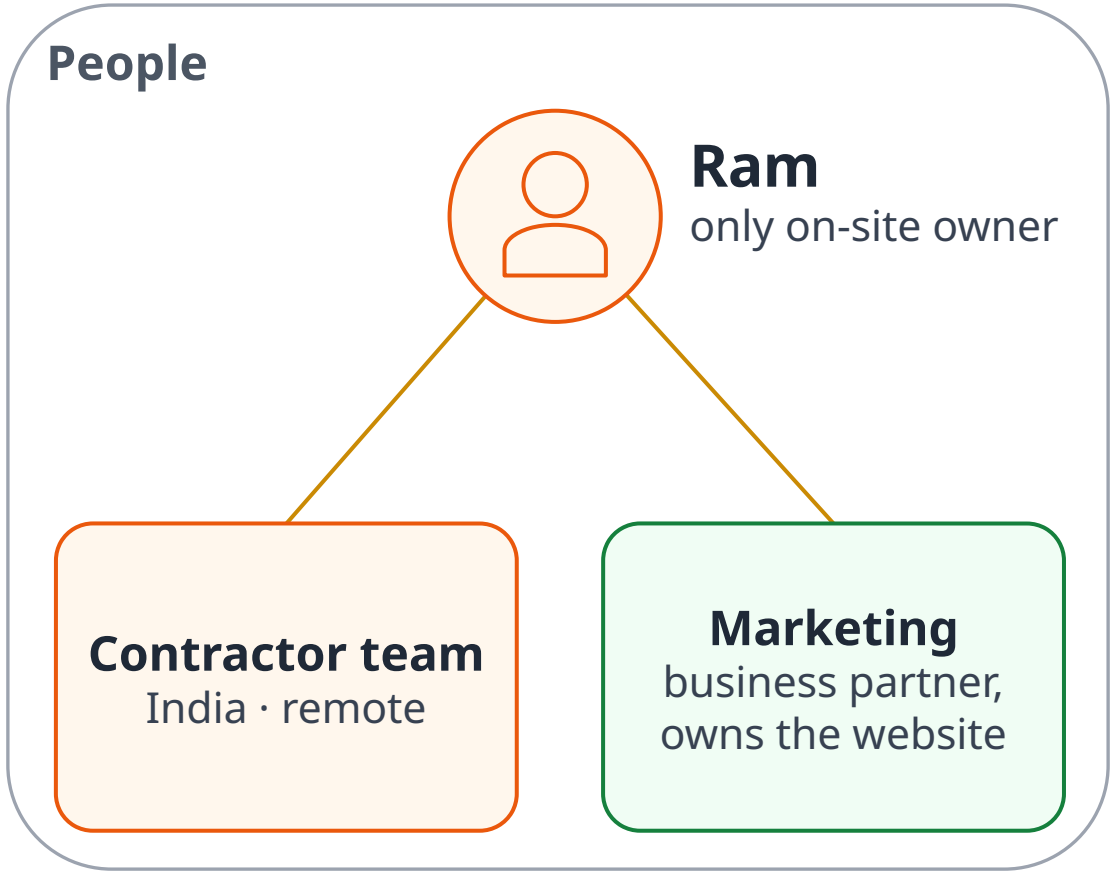

Role progression

Senior .NET Engineer → Lead Commerce Architect

Several platform migrations

Sitecore + Salesforce Commerce Cloud

People

> One owner on site · a remote contractor team · a business partner who owns the result

Era 3 · First Republic Bank (later acquired by JPMorgan Chase) · ~3 years

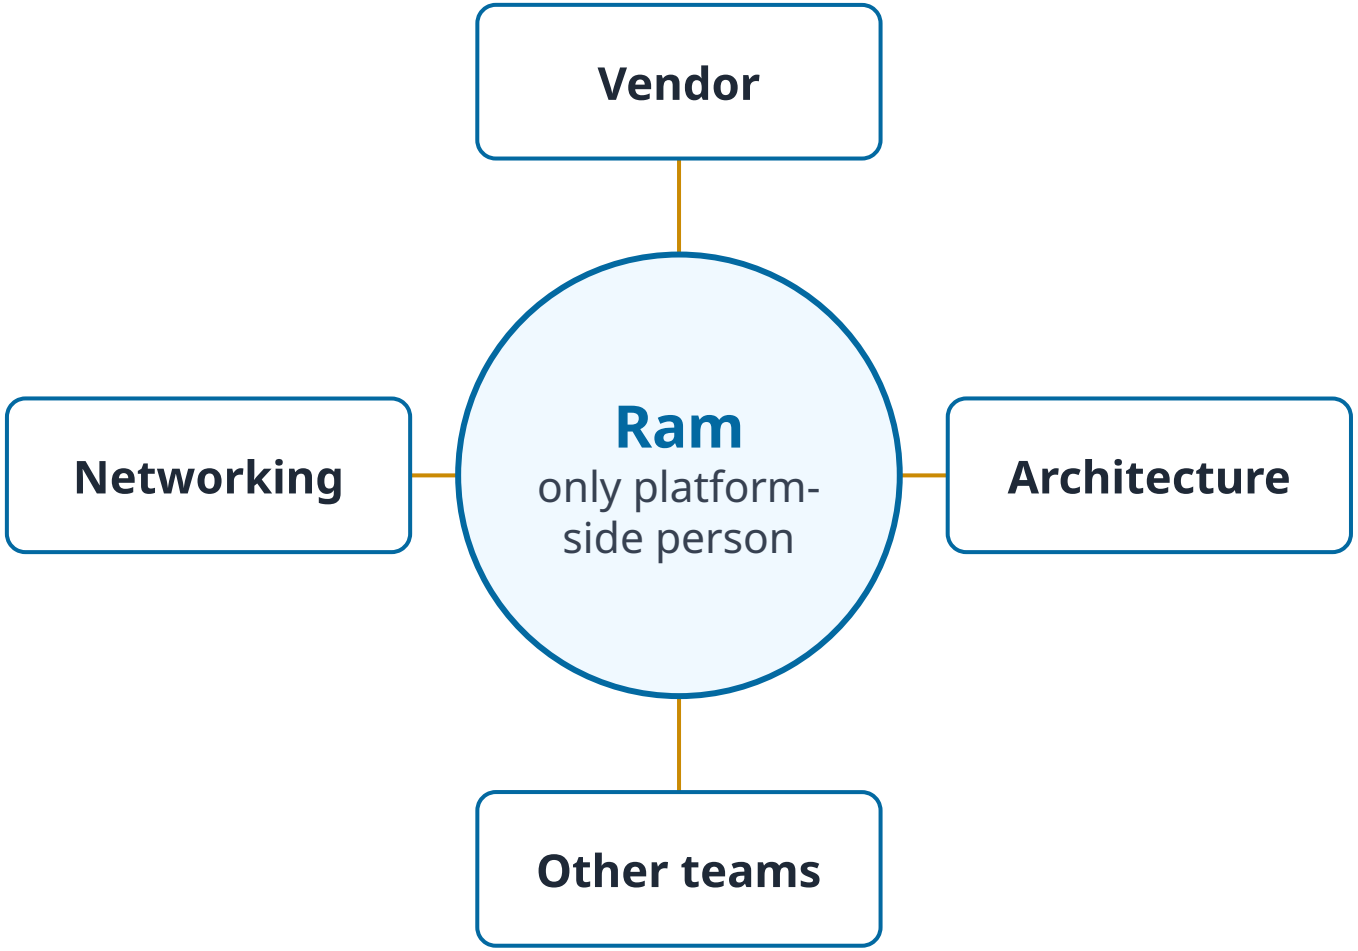

Technical Lead, Platform

~3
years

Content platform for the bank's public website

Runs on Azure

Financial services starts here

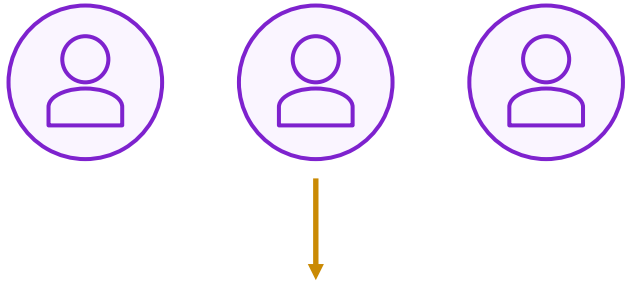

One platform owner in the middle · a vendor + internal teams

Era 4 · JPMorgan Chase · ~3 years

DevOps / SRE across several teams

Associate Software Engineer III

Several teams

Application observability stack

Internal private Kubernetes platform

One team · several AWS applications

MLOps app

AML app
Anti-Money Laundering

+ other AWS applications

Reliability, security & compliance

Reliability

Security

Compliance

Platform & infrastructure side

Production · production AWS environments

Final year:
role moved mainly into MLOps

SRE → MLOps

Keeping systems reliable in production is exactly the skill ML systems need